A GREAT CITY DIRECTORY ORGANIZATION SERVING

3,651,320 People in the most densely populated area in America

Annually, with a trained organization within these five states, serving one hundred and forty-one communities, each street and building is thoroughly canvassed for new names, changes and verification of prior information, after which by trained investigators, sections are again recanvassed to keep our name takers keyed up to a high degree of accuracy.

Through the process of sorting, compilation and still greater refining for accuracy, each name is handled twelve times as it becomes a part of the five departments when combined and printed into city directories, renders a service unsurpassed for those who know that without knowledge, activities become wasteful, confused and subject to duplication.

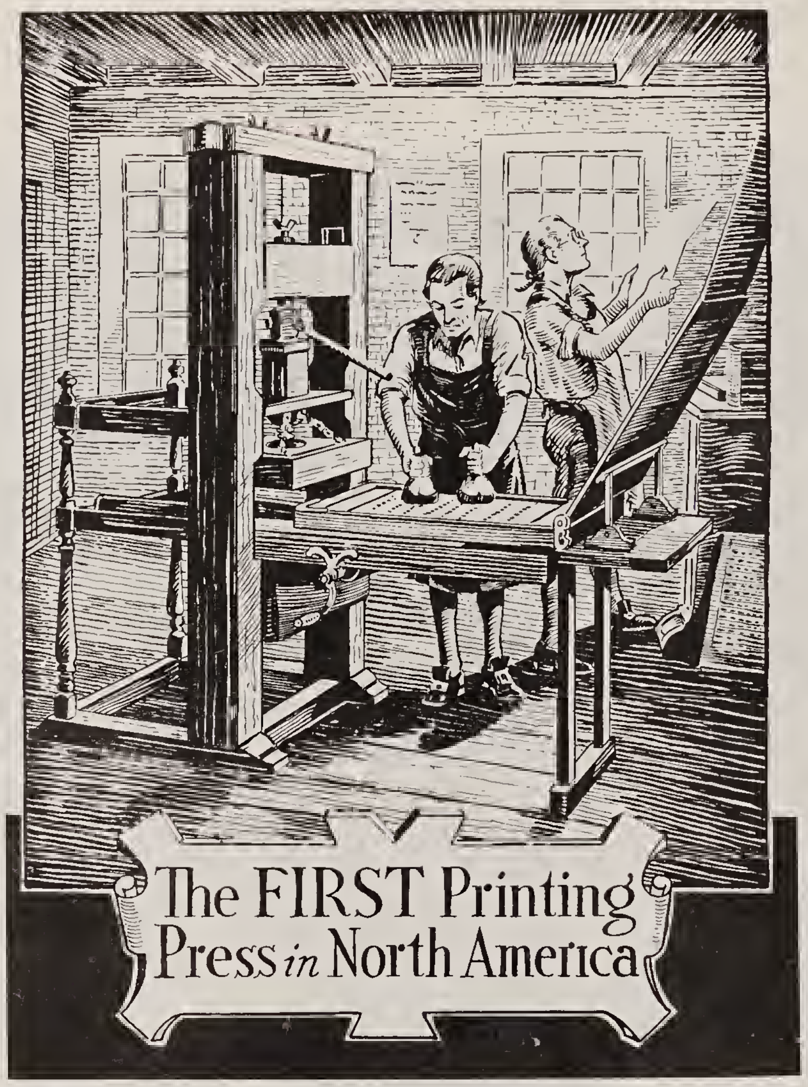
CAMBRIDGE IS A CITY WHERE THINGS HAPPEN FIRST

- The first college in the United States—Harvard—was founded in 1636 in Cambridge.



- The first printing press in North America was set up in Cambridge in 1638. Stephen Daye printed the first book in America in 1640.
- The first vaccination against smallpox was administered in Cambridge in 1800 by Dr. Benjamin Waterhouse who was the first Surgeon General of the United States Army.
- The first great American telescope was manufactured in Cambridge in 1850.
- The first sewing machine was perfected in 1845 by Elias Howe while working in the home of a Cambridge machinist.
- The first pressed glass was molded in Cambridge in 1827. Enoch Robinson revolutionized the glass making industry when he injected molten glass into a mold to create the first piece of pressed glass —a water tumbler.
- The first experimental wind tunnel was built at Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Cambridge in 1913. Research at the Wright Wind Tunnel contributed greatly to the advancement of the aircraft industry.
- The first concepts of inertial guidance for missiles were formulated by researchers and engineers at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The Polaris Missile Guidance system resulted.
- Many firsts in the future will result from the continuing research and development program now in progress in Cambridge. Massachusetts Institute of Technology, entering its second century, has 900 non-classified research projects now in progress.

The historic past and the future exist side by side in Cambridge. Famous historical sites contrast with modern buildings in which enterprises of the future are planned for the betterment of mankind and the Nation.

INTERPRETING AND PRESERVING THE CITY'S PAST

Cambridge has a Historical Commission to administer historic districts and to survey, evaluate, and interpret the city's architectural heritage.

Four historic districts have thus far been established in Cambridge. Within these districts, the Commission must pass on all exterior changes, so that the character of the environment may be preserved along with the individual landmarks. The four districts are the Cambridge Common Historic District, which comprises the Common and its periphery; the Longfellow Historic District, which includes the Longfellow House and nearby property extending to the Charles River; the Fayerweather-Lee Historic District which comprises part of the north side of Brattle Street; and the Lowell Historic District, which centers on the mansion "Elmwood."

As a guide to historic sites around Harvard Square, the Commission has prepared a Heritage Trail brochure, available free from the City Manager's office. This brochure outlines a walking tour of major landmarks, explaining their interest and importance.

The Cambridge Historical Commission's principal activity since 1964 has been its Survey of Architectural History in Cambridge. The survey involves a building-by-building inventory and extensive research into development patterns and building histories. Work is progressing through the entire city, from east to west. Already published are reports on East Cambridge and Mid Cambridge. Reports on Cambridgeport and Old Cambridge are in preparation.

Each of the Commission's survey reports contains over a hundred pages of amply illustrated text discussing historical background, architectural development, and environmental character, with recommendations for preservation and future use. The reports are available at $4.95 each from local bookstores or from the distributor, The M.I.T. Press.

The offices of the Cambridge Historical Commission are in the City Hall Annex, 57 Inman Street, where its files of photographs and archival material are available for study.

VICTORIAN HOUSES IN CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge is a desirable place to live. It is a city with universities and scientific research, a city with interesting shops and entertainment, a city with a variety of pleasant residential streets. Some streets are lined with houses that are similar in size and age; other streets display a mixture of sizes and styles; still others have high-rise apartment buildings interspersed with older dwellings. People living in Cambridge today enjoy modern city life in a historical setting. The combination of city and suburb provides an environment of varied activity and visual interest. One of the city's resources of particular visual and historical value is its Victorian houses. Their quantity and quality prove that Cambridge was as desirable a place to live in the nineteenth century as it is today. This capsule view of the city's Victorian houses, selected from the files of the Cambridge Historical Commission, shows the range of residential architecture that was "modern" in the nineteenth century and that still enriches Cambridge life.

MODERN ARCHITECTURE IN CAMBRIDGE

CAMBRIDGE BUILDINGS BY CAMBRIDGE ARCHITECTS

In recent years Cambridge has been fortunate in the abundance of new structures of high architectural quality which will contribute to the aesthetic appearance of the City for future generations. While an exhaustive list of outstanding new buildings would more than fill these pages, special recognition is limited here to those designed by architects living, working or teaching in Cambridge. Even on this restricted basis, however, it has not been possible to include all such structures worthy of mention.

EDUCATION IN CAMBRIDGE

MORSE SCHOOL

Cambridge, Massachusetts,–"The University City" offers a wide choice of elementary and secondary school facilities.

In the Public School system there are fifteen elementary schools, two vocational schools, and two high schools. Shown above is one of the modern school buildings of the public school system.

The Public School system provides many services to individual pupils without charge. These services include psychological testing, psychiatric evaluation, instruction for the gifted student, the retarded, the physically handicapped in school and at home, for those with speech, hearing, reading and visual defects.

There are eleven elementary and six secondary schools in the parochial school system. Private schools on the elementary and secondary levels are available as are several college preparatory schools.

In the adult education area there are University Extension courses available at Harvard University and Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Education is one of Cambridge's "most outstanding products". Its educational opportunities attract scholars from all over the world.

DOT® DOES MORE THAN

"HOLD THINGS TOGETHER"

The billions of special-purpose fasteners made by DOT do hold things together, of course; that is their basic function. But they do more than that. They help speed assembly, cut costs and improve product performance in many different industries . . . electronics, automobiles, aircraft and missiles, furniture, clothing, leather goods, to name only a few.

For the electronics industry particularly, United-Carr not only makes fastening and connecting devices in volume quantities but also a tremendous variety of switches, sockets, shock mounts, indicator lights and other special assemblies. Two of United-Carr's divisions have also become important suppliers of etched and stamped electronic circuitry.

Widely experienced design engineering staffs are backed by complete facilities for large-scale production of intricate metal stampings, plastic components and composite assemblies of metal and plastics. Thirty up-to-date plants in the U. S., Canada, Great Britain and Australia.
